

Biography – David Rosenberg

David Rosenberg is an English solicitor.

He has a law degree and before qualifying as a solicitor he spent 3 years doing legal research and teaching in the UK and US.

He worked for 12 years in the IP department of Clifford Chance, engaging in litigation and transactional work, primarily in the patent field.

He joined GSK in February 2000 to perform a policy role in the IP department. He has worked extensively on access to medicines issues, questions relating to European patent litigation reform and the Convention on Biological Diversity

He represents GSK on the IP committees of key pharmaceutical industry organisations and of various UK and European cross-industry organisations. He chairs the IP committee of the European Federation on Pharmaceutical Industries and Associations and chairs its IP workstream dealing with the sector enquiry