

Dev Gangjee

Dev Gangjee is a Lecturer in Intellectual Property at the London School of Economics. He was educated at the National Law School of India (BA, LLB) and the University of Oxford (BCL, DPhil), where he was a Rhodes Scholar. His research interests are in the field of intellectual property law, with a focus on trade marks, geographical indications, domain names and unfair competition. Dev has presented research on these areas in Japan, the US, China and India. He is currently completing a monograph on geographical indications for Cambridge University Press. He is a Research Affiliate at Osgoode Hall, an Associate of the Oxford IP Research Centre and was previously an invited researcher at the Institute of IP, Tokyo. Dev has advised both governments and law firms on IP issues.